DEATH OF PIONEER EDITOR

Anthony Noltner, Well-Known Democratic Politician and Writer, Passes Away, Aged 68 Years.

Anthony Noltner, a pioneer newspaper man, regent of the Oregon State Normal school, and one of Oregon's well-known citizens, died suddenly at the home of his son, A. L. Noltner, in Portland, Tuesday morning, of heart trouble. His last illness was of only a few days' duration, and death came peacefully and quietly.

Mr. Noltner was born in Germany, June 11, 1839, and came with his parents to the United States in early boyhood. At the age of 10 he joined his father in the rush to the gold mines in California. He learned the printer's trade after reaching San Francisco, and was a compositor on the Alta at a time when many writers who afterward gained world-wide fame in the literary world were employed on the editorial staff of that paper.

He arrived in Oregon, October 11, 1857, and within a week located at Corvallis, where he formed a partnership with Hon. J. H. Slater in the publication of the Occidental Messenger. He afterwards published the Eugene Review, being associated with Joaquin Miller in the work. During the Civil War, his paper was refused admission to the mails because of his rabid editorials.

He published the Daily Standard in Portland for 15 years, until the plant was destroyed by fire. His last venture was the Portland Dispatch, which he maintained for five or six years.

In May, 1861, Mr. Noltner married Miss Ellen Fox. His wife lived but a short time, and in 1866 he was again married, his second wife being Miss Martha N. Williams, a daughter of one of Polk county's pioneer families. His second wife died June 3, 1892.

Three sons and two daughters survive. They are: Fred and A. L. Noltner, of Portland; George Noltner, of Seattle; Mrs. Isabelle Welch and Mrs. Leona Hickman, of Portland.
